

2015 : International conference on Women's health and work organised by the European Trade Union Institute

Plenary :

- K Lippel (University of Ottawa) Work organisation and how it affects health : do men and women face the same hazards?

- K. Messing (Université du Québec à Montréal) : the health of female workers. Is science blind?

Oral presentations :

- F. Chappert (ANACT France) and H. Plassoux (ANACT France) : Towards an organisational approach to prevention of inequalities between men and women in the areas of pay, health and career

- S. Salerno (Agenzia nazionale per le nuove tecnologie) : Compensating for the inequalities experienced as a woman and/or an immigrant : the case of musculoskeletal occupational diseases in Italy

- S. Caroly (University of Grenoble, France) : Effects of the sexual division of labour in cattle-breeding on MSD among women workers

- C. Barros, L. Cunha, M. Santos (Universidade do Porto) : Occupational diseases in Portugal : contributions of a contextualized gender approach to the analysis of working conditions at local level

- M. Vignet (University of Lyon, France) : Some hypotheses to explain differing male and female patterns of absenteeism

- L. Cunha (Universidade do Porto). What can be learned from conversations with women bus drivers in the context of a traditionally male-dominated occupation

- D. Cau-Bareille (University of Lyon, France) : Do part-time women secondary-school teachers experience discrimination?

- S. Caroly (University of Grenoble, France) : Women workers and the risks posed by nanomaterials : how do requests for ergonomic intervention emerge?